Well-Mept Secrets. Dr. Lincoin, one of the most prominent of the physicians here, was the regular attendant of President Arthur. Since the latter's death the doctor has given an account of two serious attacks of illness of Arthur when he was President about which the public has never heard a word. Arthur President. One attack, which nearly carried him off, and which is known to the at once. public, occurred on board the Tallapoosa when Mr. Arthur was absent on his Florida trip. The news of this attack got out, and within a few days afterward exact details of the danger through which the President had passed were given. These stories were at that time denied at the White House in the most positive and dogmatic way. The President was so sensitive upon the subject of his health that the obsequious members of his personal staff felt called upon to make denials of what they know to be true. Dr. Lincoln says there were two other occasions when the President came as near dying as on the occasion of his Florida trip. His first serious attack occurred in Senator Jones's house, on Capitol Hill, when Arthur was Vice President. The attack took place during Arthur's visit to Washington in July after he had been called here to await the result of Garfield's wounds. Mr. Arthur at the time was weighed down with worry and responsibility. He was a very emotional man. The criticisms at that time, the excitement of his surround-ings and the responsibility which was threatening to come upon his shoulders, made a combination of outward influence which depressed him very much. Then he caught cold, and this cold brought on an attack of nervous rheumatism. Dr. Lincoln was summoned to attend him one oight, and found Mr. Arthur in a very dan-gerous condition. Dr. Lincoln really thought he would die. The news of the attack was well kept. Not a single member of the Garfield Cabinet over knew it. The know-the illness was anything more than an or-dinary cold. Think what a sensation was suppressed by this closemouthed doctor! Garfield was lying at the point of death at the White House and his successor, for TLES, HEARTHS, &c., &c., &c.

THE IMBEDDED FROG DELUSION.—One of the most remarkable fictions that has ever been perpetrated is that relating to the frog in solid rock. The story crops out every few years, or, indeed months, in the local press of this country or Europe, the statement being made that such a woodchopper or blaster had discovered a frog or toad, as the case may be, imbedded in the solid sub-stance, where it must have been for hun-dreds or thousands of years, time being no object in such cases. Some years ago the laborers in blasting rock at Central Park found a toad after a blast six or eight feet VOLINA CORDIAL, so extensively advertised below the surface, in a crevice, and the report was circulated that it had been there port was circulated that it had been there to a thousand years.
